Salamander Laura J E Anderson

Dr. Saul Madder is considered one of the founding fathers of genetic manipulation, becoming a billionaire after creating a variety of mass produced pigmentation pills called Chameleon that can alter the color of one's skin, hair, and eyes post-birth. After winning two Nobel prizes for his research, both everything and nothing seems to have changed. Racism was declared officially over as pro-natural movements sparked across the globe, opposing the dangerous scientific innovation. Scientists were both baffled and awed by what little Saul gave of his confusing research and cryptic journals. Saul himself was clouded by mystery, surrounded by rumors from all circles, yet gifted with the ability to slip through trouble. Still, he was but a simple man wishing to live a simple life... If only fate would let him.
