Recently widowed Clairmont Jenkins is a forty-year-old pastor in a small Southwest Florida town. He's a progressive preacher with a sincere desire to do God's will and make a difference. But his high school sweetheart and wife of fifteen years dies unexpectedly. Now he is alone with the ministry and his fourteen-year-old son. He must learn to date again, be a single parent, and discover what God would have him do for his congregation and community. Readers will find an enthralling two-way love story between man and God and man and woman. How Clairmont works through his grief until he finds love again is finally a narrative about valuable Christian principles.
