On 18 February 2007, two bombs went off near the Indian city of Panipat on the Samjhota Express, a twice a weekly railway- train service between Lahore and Delhi. This train service was introduced as its name suggests (Samjhota means Agreement in both Hindi and Urdu) to enhance cordial relations between the two countries. The terrorist attack on Samjhota Express that killed 68 people (mostly Pakistanis) and injured many others was blamed once again on Lashkar-e-Taiba. Indian authorities claimed that the alleged perpetrator was named Rana Shaukat Ali and a photograph of the terrorist was released. But four months later, investigations proved that neither Rana nor Lashkar-e-Taiba but a serving lieutenant colonel of the Indian army, Lt. Col. Purohit was responsible for the terrorist attack on Samjhota Express. It was also proved that Lt. Col Purohit had links with Hindu militant groups and also provided training to extremists groups. In a sequel to the train bombings and continuation of the same conspiracy by Hindu extremists, once again the same drama was staged to malign Pakistan's image in front of the world to portray it as a sponsor of terrorism. Mumbai-Dance of The Devil has exposed the true circumstances and facts behind the Mumbai massacre that were never told by Indian media to the general public. Zaid Hamid once again successfully refutes the Indian dossier accusing Pakistan for these attacks. Zaid paints a bigger picture and proves that how the Indian intelligence agencies are working on a systematic conspiracy to encircle and defame Pakistan in the eyes of the world. Facts and analysis stated in this publication will surely change your perception of how the Mumbai attacks happened and will expose the responsible forces behind these attacks.
