Too Good: The Scott Draper Story Scott Draper, Suzi Petkovski, Michael Fox

2005 was Scott Draper's swan song year in tennis, and his rookie year in golf. Achieving the near impossible in professional sport, Scott has successfully crossed over from his first love of tennis to a more recent passion for golf. During an impressive tennis career, Scott was battling his own medical condition, OCD, when he also began assisting his wife, Kellie, who was fighting cystic fibrosis. In 1998 Kellie lost her battle, leaving Scott a widower at just 25 years of age. Around the same time he suffered a major knee injury, lost his tennis motivation, ate and drank too much and, finally, began nursing his grief on the golf course. Several years on now and Scott is a new man. He's found love and married again, retired from tennis after winning the mixed doubles at the 2005 Australian Open and is now focusing his efforts on making the cut as a pro golfer. TOO GOOD is his heartbreaking and inspiring story.
