A Plant Once Uprooted Can No Longer Hug the Ground Renee Fersen Osten

The story of a hidden child during the Holocaust years in France. Told through poetry and illustrations.

"A Plant Once Uprooted..." describes the life, the traumas, the joys and the sorrows of a small child caught in the web of the Holocaust during World War II in France. It is based on Renee Fersen Osten's autobiography "Don't They Know The World Stopped Breathing?"

Forced to leave the safety of home and family and flee from the German occupiers, she was five years old when her parents were deported to Nazi concentration camps.

Before their capture, her parents brought Renee and her older sister Yvonne to a Catholic convent in Toulouse where they were converted to Catholicism, and hidden at great risk to the nuns.

After the madness of World War II ended, they were forced to redefine their lives and identities once again.
